

CAMOZZI AND MALLOY SHARE MOUND DUTIES FOR BLUES

By ROGER L. WILLIAMS

Power at the plate that may carry them through to the second half championship of the California State league was displayed by the San Mateo Blues here yesterday as they turned back the Dan P. Maher club of San Francisco, 13 to 4.

CAMOZZI'S HOMER WINS FOR BLUES IN 10TH, 3-2

Gene Camozzi's homer in the tenth inning gave San Mateo a 3-to-2 victory over Alameda in the State league game played at San Mateo field. De Meyer started on the mound for San Mateo and held the Alamedans to three hits in the eight innings he pitched. He was relieved by Camozzi, who pitched hitless ball and finally won the game with a home run smash.

SAN MATEO PLAYS LODI

The Blues of San Mateo will be out to make it a straight victory at the expense of the Lodi aggregation Sunday afternoon at San Mateo. And they should. Justin Fitzgerald has the best team in the league but it didn't start clicking until a month ago. Since then the Blues have been unbeatable.

This winning streak has sent the Blues into second place, only one game removed from the Padres. After Sunday's battles they should be in a deadlock with the Santa Cruz club. The bees are given the edge of the Padres in their battle.

Gene Camozzi, southpaw who reminds you of Tennyson's "Brook" seems to go on forever—will pitch for the San Mateo aggregation. The veteran has been pitching for many years but he still ranks as one of the best semi-pro twirlers in northern California. "Must be the weather," remarked Gene today. "Spec" Shea, ex-Sacramento hurler, will pitch for the Lodi club.

The game at Stockton has been called off because a fire last week destroyed the Oak Park grandstand. will be discussed next Monday night.

San Mateo will have the old reliable Gene Camozzi in the lineup this season. Gene expects to take his turn at pitching. He has not pitched any winter baseball and his old flapper had a sore shoulder with the bat, and will play some games in the outfield. As far as San Mateo is concerned, well, might it call Camozzi the old faithful? Some of the players who appear with San Mateo this season are Leo Burns, Gene Melisac, Jackie Reane, Eddie Ant, Harry Benito, George Kasech and "Fenny" Oliver.

Gene Camozzi Scores Hailer With Two Out

By JACK BROGAN

The last of the ninth—The score tied 1-1, the bags loaded, two away and portly Gene Camozzi waddles to the plate to bat for Galegari.

The left handed batting Blues manager faces Kelly, southpaw Bethlehem Steel pitcher. With the count 1 and 1, Camozzi taps one a foot inside the third base line, scoring Hailer with the winning run.

The San Mateo Blues have everything but pitching! Those fans who previously mourned the fact that the Blues possessed such a weak hurling staff and expressed these words time and again, are now praising them as a well rounded team after the masterful exhibition displayed by Nat Calegari in downing the Bethlehem Steel nine here yesterday. With Guido Simoni, Cookie Pera and Calegari they'll be tough to beat from now on.

Stages Comeback It was undoubtedly one of the best played ball games seen at the local park this year. Calegari, back after his disastrous debut Thursday night, was opposed by George Kelly, who pitched the kind of ball game that is tough to lose. Kelly gave up six hits, while Calegari was touched for nine.

Hal Stoeven, leading off in the last half of the ninth, was safe when Hill, at third, threw low to first. Hal going to second when the ball got away from Dineen. Facchini went in to run for Stoeven. Wetmore was out at first. Hailer and Hooper were purposely passed, filling the bases. Bogie hit weakly to Dineen and Facchini was forced at the plate. Then the veteran, "Buck" Camozzi, took charge.

The Blues took an early lead, Futernich scoring in the first on Stoeven's sacrifice fly. Score in Seventh In the seventh the visitors evened the count when Guinney walked and checked in on Stoeven's overthrow to third base after Dineen was nipped at first.

Hooper made a nice running catch of Guinney's high fly in right center in the fifth inning. Hill of the visitors collected three for four, and Futernich led the Blues with two for three. Just ten years ago yesterday, Camozzi, with the incomparable Tom Casey behind the plate, sent their old rivals, San Jose, home on the short end of a 12 to 3 score. Gene hit two for four and Tom two for four. Camozzi (of all things) beat out a hunt and stole a base . . . those were the days when it only took a two-base hit to score either of the old battery mates from third base . . . remember?

Stoven Stars The Blues turned in several nice fielding performances despite their three errors. Two double plays featured the proceedings. Hal Stoven continues to play a bangup game at the initial sack. In the final inning he fielded Shinski's hard blow nicely and nicked Andrews at second. Lyons fired the pellet back and Shinski was out.

San Mateo displayed a well-balanced club, and if the Blues settle down to business they should finish right up with the best of them when the second half comes to a close. They'll tangle with Modesto next Sunday on the Red's home diamond. A better line on the probable outcome will be gained at that time.

Play Ball! Iron Man Ready

"Genial Gene" Camozzi, "iron man" of the San Mateo Blues, is ready to deliver the goods Sunday afternoon, when the San Francisco Stock and Bond nine comes here to open the California State baseball league season. Appropriate ceremonies will mark the opening game. The picture of Camozzi, taken while he was in his prime with the Granat team, is one of Camozzi today—he's always in his prime.
